An aerial photograph of a large industrial textile factory complex. The main building is a long, white structure with a curved, ribbed roof and multiple rows of windows. To its right, another building has a flat roof with several large air conditioning units. A plume of white steam or smoke rises from the right side of the factory. In the foreground, a paved area with a few people and cars is visible. The background is dominated by a massive, steep mountain covered in dense green forest, with some snow visible on the distant peaks under a clear sky.

Tessuti di Sondrio History

An old photo of the city of Sondrio

Our Origins

In August 1895, in Sondrio, a small town in the heart of the Italian Alps, Emilio Spelty, his son and Giovanni Keller found a new company.

These two Swiss families immediately understand the preciousness of our territory and decide to build a plant in the Alps for the cotton yarns' production.

Spelty - Keller & C.O. is officially born.

The brand registered

In 1897 Spelty, Keller & C.O. registered the first trademark: a lithographed label, which depicts "Un camoscio rivolto verso destra con attitudine di grazia, adornato da cime di montagne (A chamois facing right with an attitude of grace, adorned with mountain tops)", as described in the certificate of the Italian Kingdom.

Fossati

Spelty and Keller left Valtellina soon and sell the factory to one of the most important families on the Italian textile scene: Fossati. This family, known as The Lords of Monza, understand immediately the enormous opportunity offered by the Valtellina's area.

Alberto fossati and his son Felice become the new owners and the leadership passes in Italian hand. At the beginning of '900s Alberto & Felice bring the factory to a complete new industrial level.

Massaua Blue 10 Sanfor

The success of the Fossati arrives soon. After recovering from the WWI, the factory specializes in production of "MASSAUA BLEU 10 SANFOR» most famous and important yarns for uniform fabric. Once developed and patented it becomes the symbol of the factory and the standard to refer to for the creation of high quality workwear.

To the Success

At the end of the WWII, Fossati decide to build a new jobsite always in Sondrio but in Via Tonale. With this new factory Fossati leads the group to new economic rise.

In 1951 Factories are such big to employ 50% of Valley's workforce.

The Adda factory

The 60s mark a fundamental date. With a strategic perspective, Fossatis complete the manufacturing process with the construction of the "Manifattura dell'Adda" division. Few Kilometers far from Sondrio, sited in Berbenno di Valtellina, produces garments used principally for the world of work uniforms.

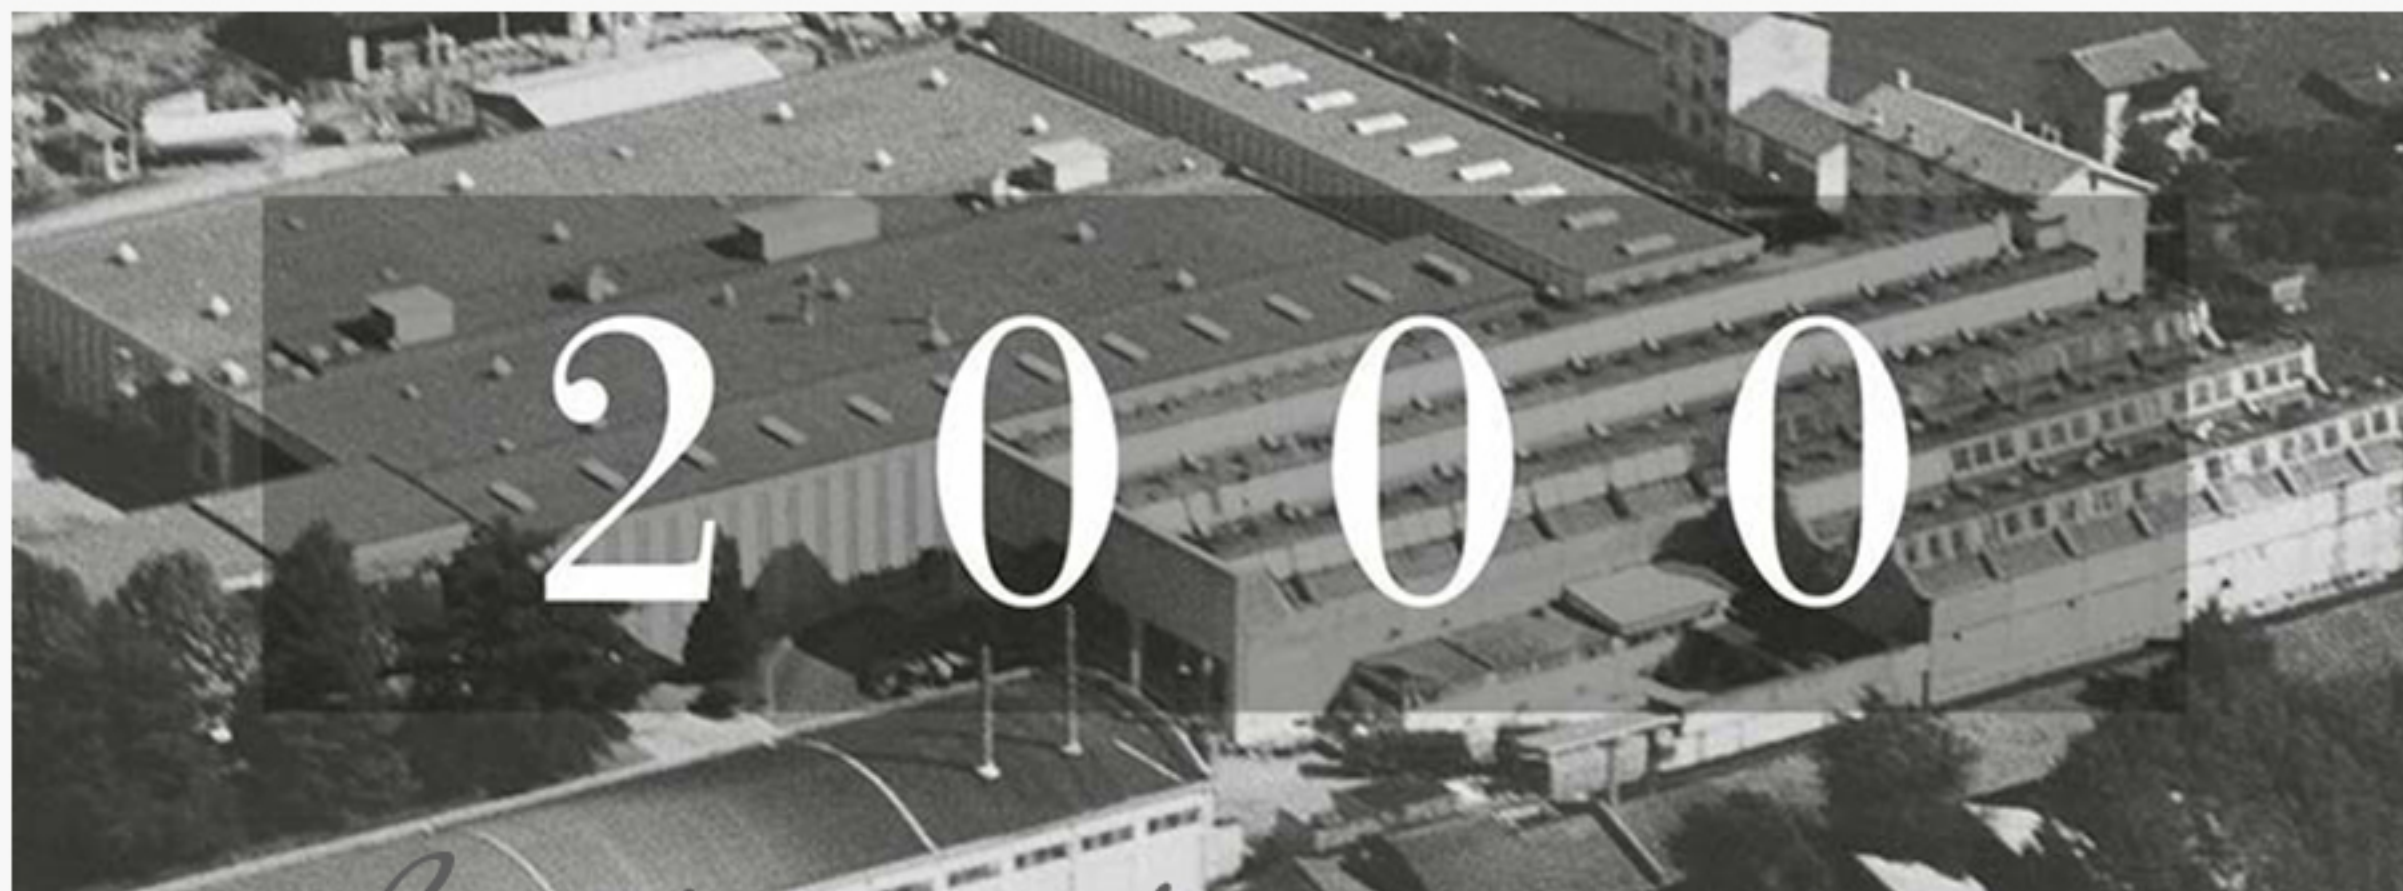

Tescon, Lanerossi and Cotoni di Sondrio

In 1975 Fossati is incorporated in the companies of the Italian state. In this period it passed from hand to hand, first becoming Tescon, then part of Lanerossi (at the time of the Eni group) and later Cotoni di Sondrio. Such a big change which projects people, still tied to territory and custom to a complex and distant system.

The "Gruppo Marzotto"

Marzotto Group, always attentive to the market and its peculiarities, identifies a great opportunity in its competitor Lanerossi. With the acquisition of it, which also includes "Cotoni di Sondrio", the Marzotto group extends its products' range.

Sondrio fabrics in the world

Marzotto Group rearranges various aspects of the factory, starting from our name which, at the end of the 1900s, became what the whole world knows today: "Tessuti di Sondrio".

In order to make itself more competitive, it invests heavily in weaving and finishing processes. It is a new dawn, which indelibly marks our international success, from the ateliers in Paris to the studios in New York and Tokyo.

Archivio Dalsasso since 1831

With the new millennium, our famous collections are further enriched with the introduction of the Archivio Dalsasso, which is a precious woolen collection.

Archivio Dalsasso was founded in Trentino in 1831 and it is famous because it is not a simple collection of fabrics, but a style of life based on a deep knowledge of materials and a deep tradition.

Beyond the fabric

Our mission consists in the creation of excellent products, based on craftsmanship and territorial distinctiveness. Design Thinking behind a proposal is influenced by many aspects: art, technology, culture and, above all, people.

We love to express pure creativity, capable of recognizing and interpreting the society and times in which it lives.
